Vintage 2022 . . Record-cold temperatures and an unforseen frost highlighted April. The ice that accumulated on the vines post-bud-break left many wondering if there would be any grapes to harvest come Fall. July through September was surprisingly warm and helped get the growing season back on track. Warm temperatures and little rain were seen through a good portion of October, allowing the fruit extra weeks of hang time compared to the recent vintages in Oregon.

Notes : All grapes were hand-harvested and hand-sorted. The fruit underwent a two-day cold soak prior to fermentation for a total of 20 days of skin contact. 100% malolactic fermentation occurred over a five month period. The wine was aged for eight months in French oak barrels from a variety of coopers.
